EDITOR IN DISTRESS

People, If you know you're going to a party in the evening be sure to go straight home after work. These are words I wished someone had told me last Tuesday. I had just finished up last weeks issue. I called press and everything was good on their end. I was getting ready to go home when I decided to get on myspace, which is internet crack. Lo and be hold, Mister OJ Tobias was at The Lodge. If you ever been to a strip club with OJ, than you know he is a player. Raining dollars on the ladies and drinking bubbly crystal. So I raced over to have a drink with him. Well that one drink lead to about four or five drinks, doubles mind you. OJ put a stack of ones in front of me so I could tip the ladies. My favorites that day were Francisca, Candace and Jenna. While I was there Dawn Rizos, Michael Precker and Schevelle were being filmed for a segment on MSNBC about Dawn recent dealing with Newt Gingrich (Check out the story on page 15). Be sure to see the segment on MSNBC.com on The Rachel Maddow Show. After an hour or two there OJ and his friend decided to check out the Spearmint Rhino club and invited me. I had one drink and tipped a few girls before realizing it was 5 PM and I had to go home and clean up for The Lodge's Scaryoke Karaoke Party. While leaving Spearmint Rhino, I was informed they were just going to start their "Customer Appreciation Party".

Oh snap! Gonna have to skip. So I raced home, jumped in the shower and decided not to dress up. I was late and had no costume. Yeah, I'm lame. I know it. Luckily my boss Ali got there on time and saved me a seat. Actually I stole Dawn's seat but she never came by to kick me out. Like usual the buffet was delicious. I'm watching my beer belly so I only allowed myself one trip, but man I wanted more. All The Lodge employees had on some cool costumes. My favorite was the dancer dressed like Queen Antoinette. Of course the main attraction of the night was the karaoke singing on the stage, which was cool but I wanted to see some ladies. I later found out they were in the middle room. No boobs for Gil. Around 8:30pm the The Rachel Maddow show started and everyone hushed up to see the segment on The Lodge. Later that night Schevelle and her guy Tony Batman, who does A! Entertainment News, sat at the table next to us. Check out the picture of us on page 15. Also check out Tony Batman's site: http://www.tonybatman.com. You might see his writing in this magazine in the future. I sadly went home before Schevelle hit the stage. I swear I heard the DJ mention she would be up after a few more ladies and I was too tired to wait twenty minutes. My luck, she hit the stage as I was starting my car.

I'm not even gonna talk about the rest of the week. I'll save that for my tell all book which I doubt anyone will read, so I'll hire porn stars and dancers to read tasty excerpts at book signings. Maybe that will keep your attention. So, Why Worry? -Gil

Every year, I realize that Halloween is my favorite holiday right about the time that I realize that it's too late in the day to really get a cool costume together. I always promise myself that I am going to make a bigger deal out of the next year. 364 days to go before I break that promise again.

Unlike other holidays, the uniforms for Halloween are ever changing. People have been wearing Santa suits and pilgrim outfits for centuries now. No one even thought of dressing up as Jon and Kate Gosselin until a few months ago, and hopefully no one will think to do it again.

Being agnostic, Christmas and Easter don't do much for me, and not caring much for over eating or football makes me the odd man out on Thanksgiving. Fourth of July is all right, although fireworks displays tend to strike me as a bit one-dimensional. While other holidays have become less important to me with age, Halloween has become increasingly intriguing.

It really does seem to be the ultimate adult holiday now, much different from my days as a kid when you could actually go door-to-door trick or treating. I can't recall the last year that a trick or treating juvenile knocked on my door, and that part does make me a bit sad. However, the lengths to which female fun seekers of legal age will go to craft the perfect sexy/slutty fill in the occupation here costume is at an all time high. The dudes that they are hanging out with will aspire to get as bloody and gory and graphic as their imaginations can conjure.

Like Christmas, it comes with its' own genre of movies, but unlike Christmas, the movies are dark and scary. On Halloween revelers gather at haunted houses, while Christmas draws crowds to the decidedly less enthralling local church. Halloween also really freaks out the religious nuts, which is really its' own reward. They have even tried to use the occasion to witness to wayward souls with "hell houses", an unintentionally creepier alternative to haunted houses that shows the dark side of the most self righteous among us.

Musically, Halloween means big bookings for bands like The Misfits and Kiss, whereas Christmas means exclusive engagements for Andy Williams and The Rockettes. Halloween wins again.

If more holidays were less wholesome, celebrating them would be more fun.

Gravity Euphonic CD
Radio-Active-Music.com

I really don't know much about the Dallas industrial/metal/rock scene, but so far every band I've heard in that style like Razorblade Dolls and The Holocaust Humanity have impressed me. Now I can add this Dallas band Gravity Euphonic to my list of Dallas bands that rock. It seems like they've been around for a few years, but are just now releasing their debut album. Well worth the wait if they spent the extra time recording, cause the CD sounds really good. There wasn't much info in the CD about this two man duo of James French and Eric Hunter II. I'm guess the drums are sampled, but probably some of the best drum machines recordings I've heard. Musically I'm having trouble trying describe the music since it's not a style I listen to a lot. It's got some crunchy sounding guitars like Ministry, but not as distorted. Lots of catchy rhythms. The vocals from James French are pretty unique sounding. They sound like they are song from someone from Europe than Dallas. Also I realized I was visualizing some of the singing scenes from 'A Nightmare Before Christmas'. It's kind of sad that some Goth/industrial clubs continue to play the same old bands, when they could be playing some new blood and promoting their own scene. A lyric sheet would have been nice, but maybe they want you to hear your own words. Gravity Euphonic has no shows listed at this time, but I'll be sure to let you know when they do.-Gil Tha Thrill

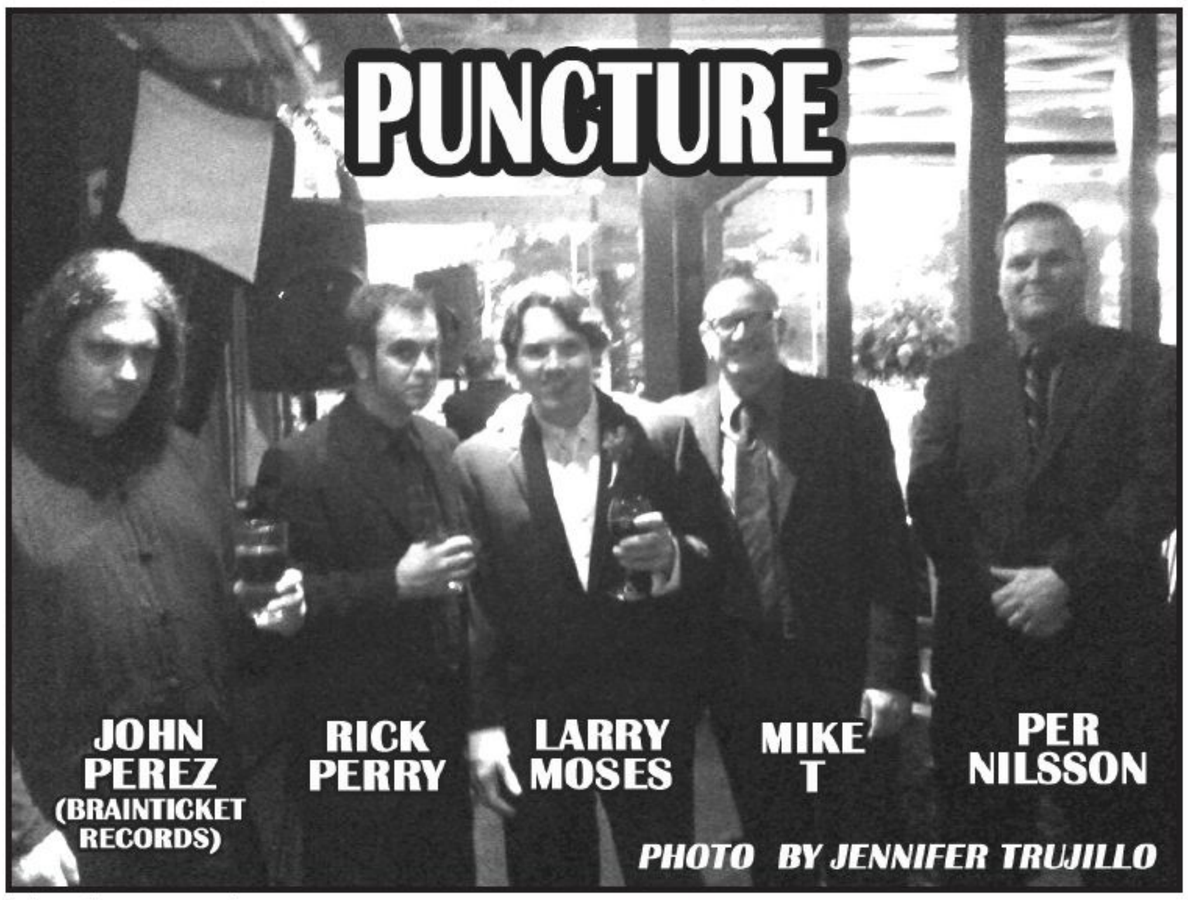
Your Rock 4ever



Ain't love grand?

I was reminded of this fact this past Halloween Saturday when Puncture member Larry Moses married his fiancee' Shelley at Fountain Place in Dallas. It was a beautiful day, and a beautful evening.

So what does this have to do with music?

Well, for the first time in quite awhile, all members of Puncture were reunited, and I was informed by Rick Perry (not the Governor -- although how different would Texas be if he were!?!) that Puncture will again unite sometime next year for a show.

Back in Buzzmonger days, Puncture graced stages in Dallas several times for Buzzmonger Nites. Their guitar-driven metallic industrial noise machine was accompanied by numerous televisions showing various demented scenes, acts of bondage, and more mayhem than should be allowed in public.

So for them all to be together in the Avanti Restaurant, cleaned up real nice and in suits, was quite a sight to behold!

What are the original members doing now? Rick Perry is currently performing with Texas Metal Alliance (which also includes former members of Rigor Mortis, Gammacide and Demonseed), is working on a CD release to be out soon and is a father.

Mike T is busy with his recording studio Sonic Research Lab, being the central US technical rep for Cakewalk, the makers of Sonar recording software (as well as a daddy and husband). He informed me that when Casey Orr is finished touring with GWAR, their band The Hellions will work on a reunion sometime early next year.

Per Nilsson can be found djing at various events at places including The Church's Lizard Lounge, as well as booking and promoting shows of his own.

Larry Moses has been onshore/offshore with his job on oil ships, and has made several music videos (using film) for bands including The Necro Tonz and Miss Hannah Hokes (both projects involving YRS4), Ghoultown, Mr. Lewis & The Funeral Five. He has also been working on a film, The Curse of The King Zippo, for the past five years... in fact, in my toast to Shelley and him, I said "I have known Moses for a long time, and we have been working on his film for longer than it has taken him to meet and marry Shelley... let's hurry up and finish this thing 'cause I ain't getting any younger!"

If you would like to get a taste of Puncture's past, you can buy their fully downloadable RE-AKTIVATION DVD is out now! Features include Pro-shot footage of their 2008 reunion performance, with stereo audio remixed by Mike T; the brand new video for "Nailed To A Cross;" 13 classic live performances from the 90's; band history with rare footage and brand new interviews; footage from their 1996 tour with GWAR; a previously unreleased video for "Gag Rule;" and high quality, downloadable MP3's of virtually ALL the Puncture material including both CDs, both demos, and rare unreleased tracks.

http://www.12poundproductions.com/re-akitvated.html

Speaking of GWAR, they returneth in another attempt to destroy Dallas this Sunday, November 8th to The Door, 2513 Main St. in Dallas. Doors are at 7 pm with The Red Chord and Job for A Cowboy opening.

This past Halloween, Gia had some naughty tricks and plenty of treats. The burlesque star and adult industries only alt-showgirl landed the centerfold and layout of Scars Magazine!

Scars, one of the top horror genre magazines, "has been a pleasure to work with because I had so much creative freedom." Gia said. She continued to say "Scars and I have some big projects in the works together, so this will not be the end of our joint effort." As cryptic as that sounds, it seems to be completely fitting for the season. Ms.Nova says she is thrilled to death to have both a major motion picture and highly regarded magazine spread during her favorite holiday.

After her cameo appearance in Rob Zombie's Halloween 2, her scantily clad spread in Scars is making people sweat this autumn. What is more fitting than having her pose as Miss October you ask? Well, the sexy pictures of her painted as a Dia de los Muertos girl and the smoken hot pin-ups of her in a tiger print one-piece as the "circus strong girl"

To see the horror goodness for yourself, check out ScarsMagazine.com. You can also keep up with Gia at Myspace.com/Gia_Nova twitter.com/Gia_Nova, GiaNovaTheNakedGypsy.Blogspot.com and VampireFreaks.com/Gia_Nova

Who Says Ugly Strippers Can't Find Work?

We're not sure where the club is located, but The Foxhole is looking to hire three dancers—specifically, one pretty one and two ugly ones.

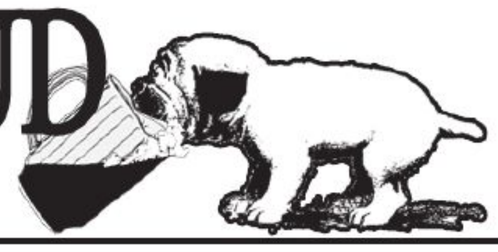
We are not sure whether that is because they know that the odds of attracting three pretty dancers are remote, or whether they are trying to keep the dancer attractiveness quotient consistent with their clientele attractiveness quotient, but it's good to know that at least one strip club in the nation is not falling for that "men only like to look at pretty girls strip" nonsense.

Men pretty much like to watch any girl dance.

METRO ANE SPORTS

BARKIN' OUT LOUD

by Pat "Two Dogs" Snow



You ever heard a word that everybody nodded their heads over like it made all the sense in the world, but after you gnawed on it for a tad you discovered it was nonsense? A word like "gawk", or perhaps "parity"?

Yeah, well, gawk doesn't mean anything, and for all it's worth, neither does parity.

Usually when I, or anybody else, use the term gawk, it's while a big lunger is making its way to the surface to be shot out over the parking lot. When a sports owner uses the word "parity" it's while he's dancing in your head with dirty feet. It's an attempt to make you feel like any team in a league has an equal chance to make it to The Big Game and possibly win it.

After 7 NFL games, how many of you think all teams are equal? Parity doesn't exist in any part of your life and it has absolutely no chance in Hell of existing in the sports world.

Has any sport ever come close? Yeah, NASCAR and IRL. How? By making rules that force all cars to be the same so allegedly it's purely the skill of the driver that wins the race. Has it been successful? Not in my opinion. Maybe driver skill makes a difference during time trials for start of race positioning, but after that, once the race settles into a groove and barring a wreck, nobody can really improve their position in the race because they can't milk any more power out of the engines.

Doesn't the draft provide parity to for poorer teams to upgrade to equally compete with better teams? The concept is flawed because it's still based upon human judgment in selecting players. The error rate is well over 50% and that don't lead to no stinking parity. Look at Detroit, Tampa, and St Louis just to name a few. And ya'll can think of several more that haven't been successful drafting.

Do you want parity? Only if you want everybody in the world to be the same, I mean, just how much fun would life be if everybody and everything was equal? IF parity were to truly exist in sports, it would take away challenge and underdogs and failures and triumphs.

And for the exact same reasons I don't want instant replay used for officiating games, just use it to make a fans interest in the game better. I don't want perfect, I don't want ideal, and I don't want utopia. I want the normal natural mess of the human experience and that includes struggle and mistakes and errors, from players, coaches and referees.

Let's muddy our hands with some get it on.

We all know what the old expression: "like a fish out of water" means. This week that not so coveted mention goes to Terry Bradshaw. Yeah he's popular because he's the good old boy "everyman" and has a great sense of humor. What he does need to do is stick with football analysis and what he doesn't need to do is get involved in soap opera.

Early in the season on national tv he furiously lambasted Bret Favre on that whole scene, which TB shudda just kept out of it. So, before the Vikings at Packers game, TB sets down for an interview with BF to "get the new whole story", and I was wondering if TB would man up and treat BF right for what he's done this season. I mean, c'mon, by any normal quarterback's standards Favre's having a hell'uva season, but for a 40 year old in his 18th season, he's having a megasuperstratospheric season.

Bradshaw was totally lame in that he didn't eat any crow for his attempt to turn a national audience against Favre. Terry's famous for telling everyone that players have to be stand up guys, have to accept responsibility for their actions, all that stuff, but when it came time for Bradshaw to accept it, he chickened out. He shudda made a loud point of apologizing for what he'd said, and he should've just as furiously praised Favre for what he's accomplished so far this season. Don't be tellin' others how to be a man if you won't do it yourself.

How about talkin' some local college football, like SMU football. Wha'd old Two Dogs tell ya? Huh? Yeah, June Jones and staff have got this team turned and started down the right track. They're now 4-4 (3-1 CUSA) with a schedule of Rice, UTEP, at Marshall, and finish it off with Tulane.

SMU needs to surgically finish off Rice, Marshall, and Tulane. The UTEP contest actually ought to be a real football game, one everyone here locally truly ought to go to. The Ponies ought to finish at least 7-5, which should qualify them for a bowl berth, and possibly finish out 8-4, which would be an even better bowl berth. The HILL is growing.

What about the future of the Red River shootout staying in Dallas? Doesn't look so good now, does it, and that falls right on the shoulders of the City and DART.

Everyone now knows that DART wasn't close to handling the rider demands brought on by the OU/T game, but it's DART's assessment of that fiasco that's seriously damaged keeping the game after the latest contract runs out. What was DART's assessment? That they didn't find any major problems, only a few very minor hiccups and that they'd not do anything different. They did confess they'd never be able to handle that kind of a demand for seats. Well, there's a roaring endorsement for our tax dollars.

I'm telling you right now that the thousands of fans that were stranded and didn't get to the game until halftime or later are totally angry to the core. By telling them that there wasn't a problem, that there won't be any changes flat tells them that they don't matter and they're attendance at the game doesn't matter.

Just how much pressure do you now think those fans, both Texas and Oklahoma are going to be putting on their schools to change venues over to Jones palace? Yeah, they're gonna flood those schools with demands to change.

Since DART isn't smart enough to know what the Red River shootout means to Dallas, then the city should've immediately clamped down on them like your jaws on a State Fair corny dog and shaken them to death. That service was abysmal and it looks like both DART's and the City of Dallas's agenda is to support local ridership and not major sporting events. Over the next few years Jones is going to attract all the major events over to Arlington and the City of Dallas is AGAIN going to continue a long history of giving away our city.

What if your greatest success takes place NOT where you wanted, but in a different place, maybe even lower on the ladder you were climbing? If you don't recognize it, don't appreciate it, then is it really a success?

Mike Nolan was the Head Coach for the 49ers being fired midway thru last season and replaced by Mike Singletary. Over the summer Nolan was hired by the Denver Bronco's new head coach, Josh McDaniels, to be the Defensive Coordinator. Simply put, Nolan just wasn't head coach material, but as the record shows, he's sure one heck'uva defensive coordinator.

METRO ANE SPORTS

Recently passed away DC Jim Johnson of the Eagles was in that position over ten years, loved it, reveled in how deeply involved in the game he was, and ignored offers to take any head coach positions. Nolan believes he HAS to be a head coach. Maybe if he gets another head coaching offer he'll do better, but the odds stand against him. Maybe you can be highly effective in a position that you yourself look down on, but if you can't recognize and enjoy your success, and that you only associate it with being "top dog" and that somehow your "lesser" if not, then I think you're really missing the boat.

How about some early season topsy turvy. Like both the NBA and Mav's basketball having some odd bounces already.

Most people thought the West was a lock for the Lakers and basically would breeze through the season and then swat the only flies brave enough to face them, the Spurs and Nuggets. Oops. Looks like there's gonna have to be some refocusing of attention on those top spots. The Spurs look to be not just a top challenger but top dog.

In the East, I sure thought it would go this way between the top dogs: Cleveland would beat Boston who'd beat Orlando who'd beat Cleveland. Whereas just about all the top media pundits GAVE the East to the Cav's because of the addition of Shaq, I thought it was dumb, and at least so far, all's it's shown is that they've got a lot of "in season" work to do to get it goin'.

Dallas Mavericks. Ok, they knocked off both LA teams, but they still have an aversion to operating from inside the paint, and this is being coached to them. Carlisle wants a flow team with Kidd leading it, and this does not allow for muscling around inside. The Mav's under Cuban just don't believe in having a strong big man in the center and they've paid for it each year. Nowitzki is tall but not as big as he could be, and he's certainly too soft to play tough man down low.

If you have to, as Carlisle puts it, "fish" for players to bring it, if you deliberately play small ball, and if you rely on the 3 point shot, your gonna have some nasty headaches. Here's the reality: have some fun, but you better put your dreams of heading to the Finals in the trunk.

NFL week eight review.

What was one of the most notable actions that didn't happen during the Cowboy's victory over the Seahawks? How about we cut significantly down on the penalties, like only 1 on the offensive line, and none to Flozell Adams. Tell me that didn't contribute greatly to the victory. Successful plays that are called back because of penalties cost a team during a game, so this was a major accomplishment.

You knew Denver was finally going to run up against a wall, and Baltimore built it out of bricks. The Ravens still ran a conservative offense or the score wudda been worse than the 30-7 final. The Colts had a wall being built in front of them via the courtesy of the 49er's, but in the end they had the one small break that ended up being the difference in the game. If you're not thinking San Fran is gonna be a powerhouse next year then you're not football conscious.

In a battle of teams comfortable in the cellar, the Rams got their 1, and probably only, win of the season, thanking the Lions. Pitiful. How about Browns coach Mangini disgusted over his teams play? Geez, how about the Browns fans disgusted that Mangini isn't really a coach?

The Giants finally had "IT" catch up to them, and they've got a huge problem of fixin' it, and I doubt if they get 'er done this season. The Jets are suffering from rookie-itis, a known phenomenon that befuddles offensive coordinators dealing with first year QB's. Miami's been involved in some great games this year, too bad they've not won many.

Did you like the Titans first win? Don't worry, VY wasn't allowed to do very much, certainly not enough to show the organization if he's worth keeping yet. He'll get more work next week, unfortunately for VY it's against the 49er's and they're less than forgiving defense. Whoosh.

NFL week nine

Bye week: Bills, Browns, Raiders, Rams, Vikings, and Jets.

Sunday noon games.
We don't have any cellar teams playing powder puff football against each other this week, but we do have some one sided whuppin's coming. Packers (4-3, road 2-1) at Buc's (0-7), and Redskins (2-5, road 0-3) at Falcons (4-2, home 3-0). Green Bay and Atlanta are both coming off losses they didn't want or like, and this doesn't bode well for either Tamp Bay or Washington. For those Las Vegas players you might want to take the line on these two, plus parlay them up.

A little closer contests but still not the kind that help snacks digest. Cardinals (4-3, road 3-0) at Bears (4-3, home 3-0), and yes, Chiefs (1-6, road 1-2) at Jags (3-4, home 2-1). Hey, Jag's Coach Jack Del Rio is obviously in his last season.

And three really good contests that justify why you spent all that money on grills and snacks and garage refrigerators and neat sunglasses. Dolphins (3-4, road 1-2) at Patriots (5-2, home 4-0), Texans (5-3, road 3-1) at Colts (7-0, home 3-0), and Ravens (4-3, road 1-2) at Bengals (5-2, home 2-2). All three of these are division contests and all three are gonna be tough smash mouth games. Miami is the only one today who actually has the chance to be the upset pick.

3 o'clock games.
They must be playin' this one over a dump cause it's sure gonna stink: Lions (1-6, road 0-3) at Seahawks (2-5, home 2-2). I don't even have the heart to bash this one.

It's too bad that in the NFL dogs don't get the same love as your kids four footed ones do. Panthers (3-4, road 2-2) at Saints (6-0, home 3-0). Carolina may think they've done something after last week's upset over Arizona, but New Orleans isn't amused.

Things improve with this one, if only to see if Vince Young is gonna cry or leave the game and refuse to come back in: Titans (1-6, road 0-4) at 49er's (3-4, home 2-1). Tennessee does have a running game, but San Francisco is not in the mood to let it.

And this one is sure to start the holiday season early for somebody: Chargers (4-3, road 2-1) at Giants (5-3, home 2-1). Eli might finally have some success against an injured San Diego defense, but Rivers oughta have a ball against New York's confused D.

Sunday 7:30 game.
Early in the season you didn't give this game much thought, then the rabbit came out of the hat and the NFC East changed: Cowboys (5-2, road 2-1) at Eagles (5-2, home 3-1). These cities don't like each other, these teams don't like each other, and our weather don't like each other. I don't even like their momma's, who've all been known to wear combat boots.

It's taken the Philadelphia players, coaches, and staff longer than normal to learn the rules of the game, like when McNabb didn't know a NFL game could end in a tie. They also believe they're Philly sub is better'n Texas BBQ. In snowy weather the fans will put flashlight batteries inside snowballs and toss 'em at players. How dumb. We'll just take whole cactus and toss it at those idiots.

This is THE GAME OF THE DAY. If you can't get up for this one, not even one of those "blue" pills will help you 'cause you're already dead.

Monday Night Football.
We're now gonna see how football coaches adapt and who's gonna be the most successful: Steelers (5-2, road 1-2) at Broncos (6-1, home 3-0). Pittsburgh had to weather a rough spot and learn what kind of a team it is, now its Denver's turn. You know that Steelers DC Dick LeBeau, one of the best DC's in the league, is going to have studied what the Ravens just whipped on Denver, plus he's gonna bring a truckload of blitzes, blitzkriegs, dive bombers, stick fingers in eyes, bite arms legs and fingers, and in general cause great mayhem. Crazed fans in Denver who've turned Orange will be pumped and psyched for this game, but they better learn how to genuflect to keep their offensive line from letting anything happen to Orton.

Why Being Grumpy Is Good For You, As Scientists Find It Improves Memory

If you're feeling like a sourpuss today, it may not be a reason to frown.

For, according to research, being grumpy makes us better at decision-making and less gullible.

In contrast, those annoying happy types who tell us to cheer up tend to make more mistakes because they'll believe anything they're told.

The revelations come from a psychology expert who has been studying the effects of positive and negative emotions.

Professor Joseph Forgas found those in a bad mood provide more accurate eyewitness accounts of events than those in a good mood.

A series of experiments also backed up his findings that the grumpier we are, the more likely we are to get problems sorted out and make less errors.

Whereas positive mood seems to promote creativity, flexibility, co-operation and reliance on mental shortcuts, negative moods trigger more attentive, careful thinking, paying greater attention to the external world,' Professor Forgas writes in this month's Australian Science Journal.

A sad person can cope with more demanding situations than a happy one because of the way the brain 'promotes information processing strategies', he says.

His experiments included asking people to judge the truth of urban myths after putting them into good or bad moods through watching films.

The sad group were less likely to believe the stories.

Professor Forgas, of the University of New South Wales, also found negativity promoted better communication.

Till Death Do Us Part: Walmart.com Selling Caskets

Wal-Mart Stores Inc is now catering to its shoppers' needs from cradle to grave.

The world's largest retailer has introduced online sales of caskets, expanding a merchandise selection that spans engagement rings and baby gear to a new major milestone in its shoppers' lives.

Shoppers can choose from the Lady de Guadalupe steel casket for $895 or a sienna bronze casket for $2,899.00.

Walmart.com spokesman Ravi Jariwala said it is selling the products as a "limited beta test" that launched within the last few weeks.

Wal-Mart has been revamping its merchandise selection in stores and online to expand into categories it believes have high potential for growth.

The funeral service industry generates $11 billion in revenue a year, according to the National Funeral Directors Association. In 2007, the association said the U.S. death rate was 8.0 people per thousand, and that is expected to rise to 9.3 people per thousand by the year 2020.

The caskets do not qualify for Walmart.com's free site-to-store shipping program, where shoppers can buy an item online and have it shipped to a local store for free.

Instead, the website says the caskets require freight delivery to the shopper's preferred address. The estimated shipping cost for the sienna bronze casket is $99.

Competitor Costco Wholesale Corp already sells caskets online.

Ducati Welcomes Sex Pistols Guitarist Steve Jones into the Family

Ducati North America announced today that avid motorcyclist, Sex Pistols guitarist, and host of LA radio's beloved "Jonesey's Jukebox" Steve Jones, has taken delivery of a new customized Hypermotard S at Ducati headquarters.

Known for his genre defining music and straight talk, Jones recently expanded his bike collection to include the rambunctious Ducati Hypermotard S due to its aggressive styling and exceptional fun factor. Steve had been eying the model since first riding one at Ducati North America headquarters earlier this Spring. He bought the motorcycle to celebrate his return to the Los Angeles airwaves this fall.

"I've always admired Ducati from a distance but never found something that suits me. That all changed after that first ride on the Hypermotard. I knew I had to have her. All my mates are jealous- and that suits me just fine!"

OCC Rocks CD

Orange County Choppers, the ambitious custom motorcycle brand, is proud to present OCC ROCKS, a winning classic rock compilation CD, curated by OCC founder Paul Teutul, Sr., star of the hugely successful television show American Chopper.

The OCC ROCKS compilation features Mountain, Eddie Money, Mott The Hoople, Rick Derringer, Blue Oyster Cult, Toto, Ted Nugent, Guess Who, Kansas, The Outlaws, Molly Hatchet, Judas Priest and three tracks by OCC the Band, 17 tracks in total, priced at $12.98. The band, which has opened up for Lynyrd Skynyrd, complements Paul Sr. s superb selection of classic rock numbers with their bluesy rock n roll flavor. OCC ROCKS shows that classic rock is never out of style, especially when brought together with the Orange County Choppers.

Easy Rider 40th Anniversary

Peter Fonda, who played Wyatt in the 1969 cult classic, Easy Rider, was in Glendale, CA on Friday to help promote the Blu-Ray release of the film which marks the 40th anniversary. The movie was scheduled to be shown at the Love Ride event that was canceled this year, instead the film screened at a local Harley-Davidson dealer.

One of the film's main objective was to expose violence and racism in the U.S. in a negative light but instead it seems that it was taken the wrong way with most, glorifying the lifestyle that was portrayed in the film.

In the end of the film, Wyatt tells his buddy Billy, "We blew it.", which has been translated many different ways over the years but Fonda, the co-writer and producer of the film, makes it clear in his phone interview with Reuters.

People often ask me, 'Do I still feel the movie is relevant?' And my answer to them is, when ... I say, 'We blew it,' if you look out the window today and you say we haven't blown it, (then) I don't want to take whatever drug you're on," states Fonda.

The 2009 Exotic Dancer Awards

By: Ms. Misha Morê

The industry's top adult nightclubs and feature entertainers were honored at The Expo 2009 at the Annual Adult Nightclubs & Exotic Dancer Awards in a full-blown, Vegas-showroom Awards Show. The awards are voted on by the readers of ED Club Bulletin, the industry's trade magazine.

This year's "Rock & Jock Awards Show" boasted both a rock 'n' roll and sports vibe, incorporating EXPO '09's "Building a Winning Team in Your Club" theme". The 2009 ED's Awards Show—the multi-billion-dollar adult nightclub industry's only national awards show—were presented awards to the nation's top adult clubs and feature entertainers on August 25th, 2009, during the 17th Annual Gentlemen's Club EXPO.

"With all of the great feedback we received after last year's Awards Show, there was no doubt that we had to return to the Hard Rock," says ED's Associate Publisher Dave Manack. "Everything our attendees loved about the '08 show—live music by The Crashers band, a relaxed rock 'n' roll atmosphere, a great venue, table seating, etc.—is back this year, with some new twists."

Those "twists" included a slew of special awards presenters, including a couple of superstars from the sports world. Dallas Cowboy legend and Superbowl champ Ed "Too Tall" Jones handed out ED's awards, as well as motocross superstar Carey Hart. Hart also hosted the Awards Show After Party at his nightclub Wasted Space inside the Hard Rock. Other special presenters included Lisa Ann, star of "Nailin' Palin," Howard Stern's "Ronnie the Limo Driver," porn legend Ron Jeremy, the "Naked Comedian" Jade Simone St. Clair and more.

In addition to regional adult club awards in the Northeast, Southeast, Mideast, Central, Southwest and Northwest categories, there are eight clubs nominated for the prestigious, national award for "Overall Gentlemen's Club of the Year." They included: Delilah's in Philadelphia, PA; Diamond Cabaret in Denver, CO; Larry Flynt's Hustler Club in New York, NY; Pink Pony South in Atlanta, GA; Rachel's in West Palm Beach, FL; Rick's Cabaret in New York, NY; The Lodge in Dallas, TX; and The Men's Club in Charlotte, NC.

In the entertainer award categories, the following four awards were presented: "Newcomer Feature of the Year," "Adult Movie Feature of the Year," "Club Favorite Feature of the Year" and the coveted "Overall Entertainer of the Year." The five "Entertainer of the Year" nominees, who will also provide command performances on the "Joint" stage, include Daisy Duxe, Rachelle Laree, Robyn Foxx, Schevelle and Suzie Malone.

There are also ED's awards for "Club Chain of the Year," "Feature Club of the Year," "Industry Innovator of the Year" and the Annual ED's Hall of Fame inductions.

The winners from the (2009) 12th Annual Adult Nightclub & Exotic Dancer Awards Show were:

Entertainer of the Year - Rachelle Laree
Adult Movie Feature of the Year - Teagan Presley
Newcomer Feature of the Year - Ashlynn Brooke
Club Favorite Feature of the Year - Jesse Jane
"Feature" Club of the Year - Red Parrot, El Paso, TX
Overall Gentlemen's Club of the Year - The Men's Club, Charlotte, NC
Club Chain of the Year - Deja Vu Showgirls
General Manager of the Year - Ken Sistrunk, Rick's Cabaret, New York, NY
House Mom of the Year - Shari Nevis, Rachel's, West Palm Beach, FL
Hall of Fame - Greta Shamy
Hall of Fame - Albert Bortz

I would like to thank Exotic Dancer Magazine www.exoticdancer.com for another great show in Las Vegas. I look forward to 2010!

SEX IN THE NEWZ

Accused Sex-for-Tickets Wife Cries Foul

The Philadelphia woman charged with offering sex in exchange for tickets to the World Series contends police are swinging and missing.

Susan Finkelstein, a 43-year-old University of Pennsylvania graduate student, says she wanted to take her husband to a game between her beloved Philadelphia Phillies and the New York Yankees.

She says she was simply trying to score tickets online, as she had in the past, so she put an ad in Craigslist. The ad had some apparent double entendres. It described, in part, a "gorgeous, tall, buxom blonde ... in desperate need" of the tickets.

An undercover police officer responded to the ad, and met Finkelstein at a bar in suburban Bensalem, Pa. She says she told him she needed two tickets, one for herself and one for her husband. "I wanted to negotiate prices" for the tickets, she told Smith. " ... I have pretty good negotiating skills."

Finkelstein and her lawyer, William J. Brennan, say no price had been discussed before several officers sitting at a nearby table came to arrest her. She and Brennan stopped short of recounting specifics of what else was said at the table.

Brennan hopes to get the misdemeanor charge count against Finkelstein dismissed.

Finkelstein didn't put the ad in any of the Craigslist categories in which people seek each other out for sexual encounters, Brennan pointed out to Smith. "This case would be so much different if it was in a different section, if she met him in a motel, if there was physical contact. ... She lives and dies with the Phils. (It was an) innocuous posting. (They met in) a public place. No money exchanged. No physical contact," and an ad with "no smoking gun."

Finkelstein faces a preliminary hearing in Bucks County on Dec. 3. On the bright side, she's been offered a pair of tickets to a weekend game in Philadelphia, courtesy of a radio station and car dealer.

Politician Busted With Stripper, Sex Toys, Viagra In Cemetery

A deputy assistant attorney - who claimed he was on a break when a cop caught him with a stripper and sex toys in his vehicle - has been fired.

Roland Corning, 66, was given the boot from the state's prosecutor's office after authorities spotted him in a cemetery with an 18-year-old woman who claimed to work at a strip club.

Corning apparently tried to flee the scene when an officer noticed the pair in the car. Officers said he and the teenager gave conflicting reports about what they were doing in the cemetery.

During a search of the vehicle, authorities found Viagra pills and several sex toys, items Corning said he always kept handy, "just in case," according to the police report.

Corning identified himself as an assistant attorney general and was not arrested. According to authorities, he was later released because no crime was witnessed.

No Sex For Dead Bodies At Singapore's Body Worlds Show

A controversial exhibition charting life from conception to old age using cadavers has come to Singapore this week -- but without the copulating corpses that caused an uproar in Germany.

Body Worlds' "The Cycle of Life" exhibition is one of several around the world that show skinless corpses with muscles and organs revealed, in life-like, often theatrical positions.

The specimens are from people who have agreed to donate their bodies for educational purposes.

The exhibitions, visited by some 28 million people around the world, have been criticized by some people as unacceptable, with German politicians taking special offence at "The Cycle of Life" exhibit which opened in Berlin earlier this year because it included copulating cadavers.

These corpses, however, are not on display in conservative Singapore. What's on show is a flat cross-section of two copulating bodies that only shows their internal organs.

Police Quash Nude Pumpkin Run

Each year, dozens have run down the city's streets wearing only shoes and a hollowed-out pumpkin on their heads. Police said "full" participants this year faced indecent exposure charges.

Up to 100 officers were deployed around Boulder this Halloween. As of early Sunday, local media reports said only one Halloween-related arrest was made.

Local reports say with up to 4,000 people taking part in Halloween revelry, a handful of individuals did take part in the run, but that when police caught up with them they were sufficiently clothed as to be "within the law".

A Boulder police spokesperson said as of early morning Sunday only one Halloween-related arrest had been made, which was not connected to the Naked Pumpkin Run.

A charge of indecent exposure could have led to participants being registered as sexual offenders. Last year, some 150 people turned out naked for the 10th event of its kind.

Similar runs have also taken place in other US cities including Seattle, Portland and Arcata.

On its website, the group had warned potential runners that "the violation of the Western societal more, enforced by law, of unclothed public exposure can indeed land you legal consequences.

"Furthermore, the decision to participate is yours and yours alone," it added.

War Machine Takes Aim at Adult

Mixed martial artist War Machine is entering a new arena. LA Direct Models signed the 28-year-old fighter and will represent him as he pursues a career in adult entertainment. According to the agency, he already has shot his debut scene for Digital Playground.

Machine claimed a technical knockout victory in his first MMA match in 2004 and, in his 2007 UFC debut, defeated Jared Rollins in The Ultimate Fighter 6: Team Hughes vs Team Serra. Machine's most recent fight occurred Oct. 9, cementing his record at 10 wins and 3 losses. He said he is far from finished with the sport.

"I'm still going to be fighting, [but] I'm a free agent now," claimed the 5'11" welterweight. "It's my passion. Porn is just another way for me to get paid for doing something I love to do. My mentor told me to find something you're passionate about. That's why I fight—and I love to fuck, so this is going to be good."

LA Direct owner Derek Hay is delighted War Machine chose the agency to represent him in his adult industry venture.

"Many of us are fans of MMA," Hay said. "It's exciting that we have the opportunity to guide him as he embarks on his new career."

War Machine, who legally changed his name from Jon Koppenhaver, already has posted the news to his MySpace page and seems eager to get into the swing of things. He shot his debut scene Friday for Digital Playground, performing with contract beauty Riley Steele, and is scheduled to perform again this week.

Jack's Teen America 9
Digital Playground

Digital Playground's newest contract performer McKenzie Lee teams up with horny babe Teagan Presley to bring fans an entirely anal volume of the acclaimed, high-end gonzo series. In a truly spectacular scene one has to watch to believe, McKenzie shows the no-holds-barred attitude which earned AVN's 2006 Best New Starlet award.

"Jack's Teen America 9" features Jack and his crew interviewing lovely contestants including McKenzie Lee and Teagan Presley. Jack wants to know what special "talents" they possess in order to become the next Teen America. Though their singing and dancing skills are a little rusty, the girls win extra points when they offer their tight, youthful assholes up for Jack's inspection. All the girls are quite adept at coaxing out Jack's... vote. Tiffany Hopkins, Carmen and Jazmin join the hot sucking and fucking anal action. Directed by Robby D., "Jack's Teen America 9" is full of horny girls who won't settle for second place!

Celine Wins 2010 Rhino Entertainer of the Year Competition

Celine brought a snake to the Spearmint Rhino Entertainer of the Year Finals on Thursday night, and she left with the grand prize. (photo gallery)

Remarkably, she also overcame her fear of snakes as she shook her assets while gripping a 4-foot python.

Oozing sex appeal and exhibiting no fear, the 26-year-old Guatemalan performed an Egyptian-themed, snake dance to capture the 2010 Entertainer of the Year crown in front of a standing-room-only crowd at the Torrance Spearmint Rhino. Celine, whose home club is the Van Nuys Rhino, emerged victorious from a talented field of 12 finalists from across the U.S. and Canada to win over $27,500 in cash and prizes.

"It means a lot," said Celine, who was the first contestant on stage Thursday. "I've been a performer for three years. I was a go-go dancer and model before. I love dancing. I like the crowd. I like the attention. I like to feel the crowd and feel the music."

The curvaceous, 5-foot brunette earned a one-year feature dancing contract to tour the country, $5,000 cash, a custom diamond and gold Rhino pendant worth over $5,000, a portfolio photo shoot and a $1500 gift certificate to the Rhino Superstore in the City of Industry.

"It was my first time holding a snake, nothing was rehearsed," Celine admitted. "Once I decided I wanted to do this I went to go get it today. I had to bring it, and I kind of had a phobia before. But not any more. This snake is friendly. Her name is Sin."

Dressed in a glittering gold ensemble, Celine was carried to the stage on a bed by four guys while Egyptian music played. Her exotic looks and moves included some belly dancing before she dropped her top and reached for the reptile. Then she showered her body with gold coins and jewels from a treasure chest to close her show. Celine told AVN she went with a Cleopatra theme to start, and then when she took off her crown she was inspired by "Shakira."

"I wanted to represent my country and Hispanic people," she said. "... I love competing. I won a couple shows before. I'm very used to being in front of a big crowd."

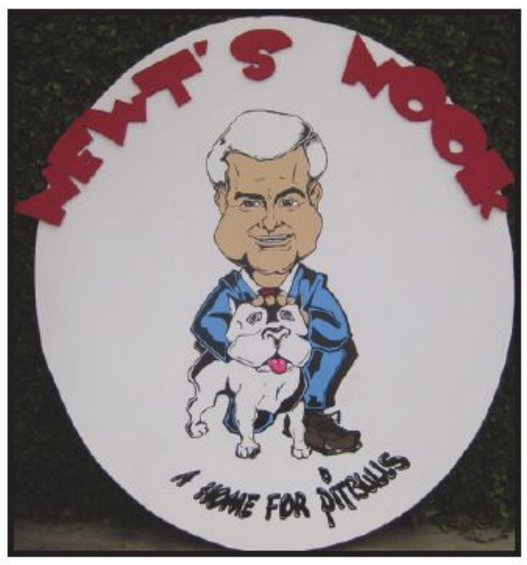
Newt Gingrich's Snub is Good News for Pit Bulls

DALLAS, TX (October 27) – When Newt Gingrich disinvited Dawn Rizos to a private dinner honoring successful entrepreneurs, he probably didn't realize that unwanted pit bulls would benefit from his snub.



But they will. Ms. Rizos, owner of The Lodge gentlemen's club in Dallas, is using the donation that Gingrich refunded to build a shelter for pit bulls and other species at an animal sanctuary in North Texas.

"At first our feelings were hurt," Ms. Rizos said. "But then we figured at least we could make something positive out of his bad manners."

In September, Gingrich's organization, American Solutions for Winning the Future, informed Ms. Rizos that she had been named Entrepreneur of the Year in Texas for her successful business and her efforts to strengthen the economy. She was invited to a dinner in Washington on October 7 to meet Gingrich and accept the award.

The Lodge, the country's best-known and most-honored gentlemen's club, has set national standards for elegance and integrity, and helps hundreds of people support their families and improve their lives.

A week before the ceremony, Gingrich's associates informed Ms. Rizos that there had been a mix-up, and that while she was indeed a worthy entrepreneur, she would not be welcome in Washington. The organization refunded the $5,000 that Ms. Rizos contributed as a requirement for receiving the award.

About the same time, Animal Guardians of America revealed it had an urgent need for a heated, air-conditioned shelter for rescue dogs, primarily pit bulls, at its sanctuary in Celina, Texas.

"We do a lot of charitable work and we love animal rescue groups," Ms. Rizos said. "The cost was about the same as the amount Newt sent back to us, so we decided to do something good with it."

The shelter, which is now being built, will be called Newt's Nook – A Home for Pit Bulls. The formal dedication is scheduled for early November.

"We're sorry that Dawn was treated so unfairly," said Annette Lambert, director of the Animal Guardians chapter in North Texas. "But this will be great for a lot of wonderful dogs. I hope Newt will stop by sometime to see what we've built in his name."

That would fine with the donor. "We'll certainly invite Mr. Gingrich to the dedication, and of course he's always welcome at The Lodge," Ms. Rizos said. "We don't hold a grudge. And we still have a lot to talk about."

The sign, created by Lodge bartender Bryan Callaway, will welcome pitbulls to their new shelter.

Did I Ever Tell You The One About...
And other strange oddities of the world

One-Legged Suspect Caught With One Stolen Shoe

Police said a one-legged suspect was caught after only one shoe went missing in a store in Belgium. An amputee was an immediate suspect when a store attendant found one shoe missing from a shop in the western Belgian town of Maldegem. Police spokesman Rik Decraemer said Monday authorities were alerted and quickly found the man who fit the description by shopkeepers. The shoe was also recovered.

The suspect, a Russian asylum seeker, faces possible charges and was handed over to judicial authorities.

Iowa Cops Nab 'Permanent Marker' Burglary Suspects

Police had no trouble identifying two men accused of trying to break into a Carroll apartment. Police were responding to a call about an attempted burglary when they pulled over a car matching the alleged suspects' vehicle. Inside the car, officers found two men with their faces blackened with permanent marker. Police said the caller described two men with painted faces attempting to break into an apartment Friday night before driving off.

Matthew McNelly, 23, and Joey Miller, 20, were arrested at gunpoint after officers were told they might be armed. Neither man had a weapon. McNelly and Miller were each charged with attempted second-degree burglary. Both men were released after posting bond.

Russian Road Roulette?

Bulgarian prosecutors are investigating a new gambling game in which drivers defy death by speeding through red lights for bets of up to 5,000 euros ($7,400), the chief prosecutor's office said Thursday.

Known as 'Russian road roulette', the driver must jump red lights at busy intersections at high speed and not crash into any other cars or pedestrians, according to local media reports. Onlookers also gamble on the result.

Prosecutors launched their investigation after media reported the new game had been held at night at busy crossroads in Sofia since the summer.

"Every time we receive a signal for such an unregulated race, we send patrols," Commissioner Vanio Stoevski, head of the Sofia Road Police, told Reuters. Since the deaths in June, police have monitored roads where such races are typically held.

Local media report that participants in the 'Russian road roulette' are informed via text messages of the venue for that particular night -- depending on the presence of police.

NH Restaurant Sets Meatball Record

The bouncing mega-meatball record has landed in the East Coast.

Matthew Mitnitsky, owner of Nonni's Italian Eatery in Concord, said Sunday that a 222.5-pound meatball was authenticated as the world's largest after being weighed by state weights and measures officials.

A Guinness Book of World Records official confirmed the big meatball as a record breaker and presented Mitnitsky with a plaque.

The old record of 198.6 pounds was set just over a month ago after Los Angeles-based talk show host Jimmy Kimmel vowed to beat a record set in Mexico. That record — 109 pounds — was set in August.

Mitnitsky said he got involved "to bring the meatball back to the East Coast because that's where it originated."

Man Rescues Phone From Dump By Listening For Ring

A determined Colorado man found his missing cell phone at a trash dump after dialing the number and listening for the ring.

Billy Boyd says he dropped the phone Tuesday while raking his yard outside Aspen and unknowingly scooped it into a bag of leaves.

He says he didn't realize his mistake until after he left the leaves at a city recycling center.

Boyd says he could hear the phone ringing but couldn't reach it because of the grate across the recycling bin. By the time he reached city officials, the bin had been emptied onto a massive leaf pile at the dump.

After a half hour of dialing, listening and sifting at the dump, Boyd found his phone.

Landfill manager Chris Hoofnagle says it's the first time he can remember anyone finding a lost item at the dump.

Woman Calls 911 To Report Herself As Drunk Driver

The call came into the 911 dispatcher: "I don't want to hurt anybody. I'm drunk." And with that, Mary Strey, 49, of Granton, reported herself as a drunken driver about three miles northeast of Neilsville in central Wisconsin.

Clark County Sheriff's Chief Deputy Jim Backus said Monday that Strey's call on Oct. 24 led deputies to cite her for misdemeanor drunken driving with a blood-alcohol level double the legal limit to drive. She makes her first court appearance Dec. 10.

Backus said drunken drivers reporting themselves is rare.

In the 911 call, Strey said she wanted to report a drunken driver and the dispatcher asked if she was behind the suspect vehicle. "I am them," Strey said. She then followed the dispatcher's advice to pull over and turn on her flashers, telling him she had been "drinking all night long."

Scientists Say Kissing Was Invented to Spread Germs

A group of scientists in England have hypothesized that the act of kissing was developed as a means to spread germs and build up immunities to illness. In other words, cooties are real.

Dr. Colin Hendrie from the University of Leeds said he believes kissing was instrumental in passing a germ called cytomegalovirus from men to women so that ladies would be protected from it during pregnancy. The bug is found in saliva and is fairly harmless, but it can cause problems with unborn babies.

"Female inoculation with a specific male's cytomegalovirus is most efficiently achieved through mouth-to-mouth contact and saliva exchange," said Hendrie, his erection barely contained beneath his lab coat (we're guessing). Regular kissing between the same couple for six months is the most effective, he said.

The article published in the Medical Hypotheses journal clearly indicates that kissing was developed primarily as a means of survival. Getting to second base, on the other hand, was developed just because it's fun.

McCain Voters Saw Testosterone Drop on Election Day

According to saliva samples taken during Election Day, both McCain and Obama voters had similar testosterone levels. But once the election was called for Obama, young male McCain voters lost a significant amount of testosterone while their Obama-voting counterparts showed no difference. Since testosterone levels generally decline during the evening, this actually constitutes a slight uptick for Obama backers.

"Political elections are dominance competitions," was how the researchers who conducted the experiment explained the discrepancy.

If an election is enough to emasculate a guy, we can only imagine what kind of eunuchs they become on Sundays after their favorite football team loses.

Transvestites On Trial For Theft

Five Filipino transvestites have gone on trial in Shanghai, accused of drugging men with adulterated foods before robbing them in a city with a reputation for an adventurous nightlife.

Prosecutors told a Shanghai court on Tuesday the five men "dressed as women and, after leading the victims into taxis or hotel rooms, induced them to eat chocolate and other foods laced with sleeping drugs," the Xinhua news agency reported on Wednesday.

The men then robbed their victims, taking mobile phones, credit cards, and a Rolex watch. They then uses the cards to buy perfume and gold, the prosecutors said.

The five men aged from 26 to 30 were accused of committing the crimes three times from late last year to February, and were detained by police in March. Local newspaper reports said the goods stolen were worth 340,000 yuan ($49,780).

Army Secretary Says Military Ready To Scrap Gay Ban

Secretary of the Army John McHugh said Sunday that lifting the military's ban on open gay service would not seriously disrupt the armed services.

McHugh told the Army Times: "Anytime you have a broad-based policy change, there are challenges to that. The Army has a big history of taking on similar issues, [with] predictions of doom and gloom that did not play out."

President Obama recently renewed his pledge to repeal the military ban, also known as "don't ask, don't tell."

"We cannot afford to cut from our ranks people with the critical skills we need to fight any more than we can afford – for our military's integrity – to force those willing to do so into careers encumbered and compromised by having to live a lie," Obama told attendees at an October fundraiser for the Human Rights Campaign, the nation's largest gay rights advocate. "So I'm working with the Pentagon, its leadership, and the members of the House and Senate on ending this policy. Legislation has been introduced in the House to make this happen. I will end 'don't ask, don't tell.' That's my commitment to you."

The policy allows gay and lesbian soldiers to work in the armed forces so long as they remain closeted about their sexual orientation and celibate.

McHugh is the highest-ranking Pentagon official to express support for repeal.

Obama Signs Gay-Inclusive Hate Crimes Bill

President Obama signed into law the Matthew Shepard & James Byrd Jr. Hate Prevention Act during a White House signing ceremony on Wednesday.

The legislation expands the definition of federal hate crimes to include sexual orientation and gender identity.

"After more than a decade of opposition we passed inclusive hate crimes legislation to help protect our citizens from violence based on what they look like, who they love, how they pray or who they are," Obama said before signing the bill.

International civil rights groups hailed passage of the bill, saying it puts the U.S. at the forefront of civil rights.

The bill is named for Matthew Shepard, a 21-year-old student at the University of Wyoming who was killed in 1998 by two men he met in a gay bar, and James Byrd Jr., a black man dragged to death behind a pickup truck a year earlier in Texas. Shepard was beaten and left to die shackled to a post along a rural road near Laramie. Judy Shepard devoted herself to passage of the bill named after her son.

The bill defines hate crimes as those motivated by prejudice against race, color, religion, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity and disability. It allows the Attorney General to assist cities and sates in the investigation and prosecution of hate crimes.

House lawmakers approved a similar bill in 2007, but it sank in the Senate under the weight of a veto threat from President George Bush. President Obama had urged lawmakers to approve the measure.

Lesbian At Helm Of Chicago Cubs

A leading voice of the gay rights movement took the helm of the Chicago Cubs front office last week, gay newssite ChicagoPride.com reported.

Forty-one-year-old Laura Ricketts is a member of the Ricketts family, whose members completed their purchase of the sports landmark earlier in the year. With the purchase, Laura became the first openly gay Major League Baseball owner.

Laura serves on the board of New York-based Lambda Legal, a nationwide group that advocates for gay rights. The group's lawyers represent LGBT clients, including those seeking the right to marry.

What role Laura will play in the actual day-to-day management of the team remains unknown, but if recent appearances are any indication, she's likely to become a major voice of the team.

The four siblings – Pete, Tom, Todd and Laura – made their first public appearance Friday at a press event headed by Tom Ricketts, 43, chairman of the Cubs.

The Ricketts, however, are not united on gay rights. Oldest brother, Pete, a conservative Republican from Omaha who made a bid for the U.S. Senate, is opposed to granting gay men and lesbians the right to marry.

In a recent interview, Laura talked down any bad blood between herself and her siblings, telling ABC affiliate WLS-TV that the family's political diversity makes for "lively conservations."

"We don't agree on all the issues of the day, but when it comes right down to it, we are family and love each other and that doesn't – that never – changes," she said.

Is The Thong Dangerous

Thong is loved by so many of us that it's hard to imagine a girl who doesn't have at least a piece in her wardrobe. It is comfortable to wear under clinging and transparent clothes and a swimsuit with a thong provides a nice even tan for your skin. However, wearing a thong too often can be dangerous.
A well-known gynecologist Lisa Masterson from Los Angeles has recently published the results of her long-term study about the influence of a thong on woman's health. So, what was she able to find out?

According to Lisa thong, when worn on the regular basis, can cause serious problems. First of all these flirty panties favor the development of yeast vaginal infections as well as urinary infections.

This type of underwear is usually made from synthetic materials, such as nylon. It is a common fact that such fabrics tend to keep moisture and warm moist environment is perfect for dangerous bacteria existence.

Besides, thong can 'help' the infection spread quickly. Lisa Masterson affirms that rectal bacteria have a good chance to get into vagina through the strip of a thong.

Meghan McCain Is Too Top-Heavy For Conservatives

There's a TWITRAGE over blogger/political daughter Meghan McCain's relatively pedestrian photo posted on Twitpic. The problem? Poor Meggers is perhaps a bit too busty for her conservative-leaning followers who responded by calling her a "slut."

"so I took a fun picture not thinking anything about what I was wearing but apparently anything other than a pantsuit I am a slut, this is... why I have been considering deleting my twitter account, what once was fun now just seems like a vessel for harassment

when I am alone in my apartment, I wear tank tops and sweat pants, I had no idea this makes me a "slut", I can't even tell you how hurt I am

ok I am getting the f off twitter, promise not to delete my account until I sleep on it, thank you for the nice words supporters

I do want to apologize to anyone that was offended by my twitpic, I have clearly made a huge mistake and am sorry 2 those that are offended."

40 Years Later, Internet Still Crashing

On October 29, 1969, Leonard Kleinrock sent the first message across the Internet, and it was all of two letters: "lo."

It crashed the entire system. The Internet was born.

Kleinrock, at UCLA, was trying to to communicate with the Stanford Research Institute, and he was trying to write the word "login." The U.S. Department of Defense's Advanced Research Projects Agency had just installed ARPANET, a network of just four computer terminals installed at universities and research institutions in California and Utah.

Unfortunately, the system was quite stable just yet, though the problem wasn't due to the "LO" message, but a memory problem with the receiving computer, Kleinrock told USA Today.

"I actually took part later in the first denial-of-service attack on the Internet as well," he joked. "We sent the first spammer in 1984 so many messages, complaining, that we shut him down."

The ARPANET system later morphed into the Internet we know today, though it took years for the network to move beyond the universities and research houses it had been designed to connect. Not until 1984 was the domain name system established. The first Web browser, NCSA Mosaic, wasn't introduced for another decade.

The Internet has continued to evolve, and a next-generation network is always underway. First there was Internet2, a faster, research- and education-focused network that's been under development since 1996.

Internet2 was built specifically to handle the massive amount of data created by researchers that participate in large scale science projects such as the Large Hadron Collider..

Today's Internet is a mesh of cables and routing equipment, much of which was designed for telephone calls. Internet2 is built with dedicated fiber optic cables, higher capacity routing centers and advanced Internet protocols, meaning there are no outdated components to slow the deluge of data.

But like the original ARPANET, Internet2 is dedicated to universities and research houses. The technology should be integrated with the existing Internet at some point in the future.

If it doesn't crash, that is.

These Winter Gloves Are Geared To Gadget Lovers

The weather's getting colder, and it's almost time to break out those scarves and gloves for the winter. But the prospect of covering up your fingers from winter's chills raises a vexing conundrum for Blackberry and iPod addicts.

Have you tried sending a text message or using a touchscreen with gloves on? Taking the Michael Jackson approach to the problem, and wearing just one glove, would eventually freeze your dialing hand.

As for fingerless gloves, they almost defeat the purpose of gloves: to keep your fingers warm. It turns out, though, there are in-between options for gadget-lovers trying to protect their digits.

London-based Etre, Ltd. sells a line of wool gloves called Touchy. They have the thumb and index finger removed for easy cell phone or PDA-fiddling, and sell for around $33.

Or, for those who must have all 10 fingers covered, North Face sells pairs of $40 iPod-compatible gloves called Etip.

The thumb and forefinger are lined with a special material called X-Static that allows you to spin those clickwheels or touchscreens without using your bare hands.

GM Brings WiFi Access To Your New Vehicle

GM announced that they will soon start offering Autonet, an always-on wireless internet solution for your car. The device can be installed in your new van, SUV, truck or crossover starting later this month. Installation will set you back $499, while service is going to cost $29 a month with a 1GB cap. There is also a 5GB package, though no price was listed. The WiFi signal will reach up to 150 feet away, so you won't be limited to using it just in your car.

The iPhone App That Lets You Use Your Mobile To Drive Your Car Remotely

Do you remember when James Bond escaped a sticky situation in Tomorrow Never Dies using his remote-controlled car? Well now technology has jumped from the world of fiction to reality.

Computer scientists in Germany have developed an iPhone application that turns the smartphone into a remote control for their self-constructed car.

The driver can operate the steering, brakes, and accelerator pedal with just a few strokes of the mobile's touchscreen.

A video camera placed on the dashboard transmits a signal to the iPhone, which allows the 'remote driver' to see everything in front of the car and adjust the car's movements accordingly.

The commands are transmitted from the iPhone via radio to the power transmission in the car. The user can park a car on the ground level as far away as the fourth floor of a building.

Both the remote control and car dubbed 'Spirit of Berlin' were constructed by the Artificial Intelligence Group at Freie Universität in Berlin.

The group is investigating how autonomous vehicles could change our lives in the future.

Professor Raúl Rojas, who directed the project, said we could one day all be dropped off and picked up by driverless taxis, which would remove the need for everyone to have their own car.

Baby And Me Special Edition For Wii; Most Unnecessary Accessory Yet

Well it's officially official. The whole Wii accessories fiasco can now be upgraded to an epidemic with the release of the special edition of Baby and Me which comes with an actual doll. With the Wiimote strapped to the little plastic bundle of joy gamers will be able to interact with the baby's on-screen counterpart in a variety of different ways including:

*Your baby reacts by giggling, gurgling or crying through the Wii remote
*Ten Baby Mode games including feed baby & send baby to sleep
*Eight Play Mode games including rattle, catch, clap & balloons
*Balance Board support: rock baby to sleep, burp baby, teach baby to walk
*Customise baby with new clothes, accessories and playrooms

And if you can't find the special edition, since they'll no doubt be flying off the shelves, the standard version of the game includes a holster so you can strap a Wiimote to an existing doll of your choice.
